A few words to parents as we approach summer break

Parents are requested to monitor the screen time of students. Students should study, complete their homework and other assignments on time. Extra time should be used for creative pursuits like hobby classes, reading books, playing games, etc. Students can also hone their technical skills by enrolling in online AI classes.

Students of higher classes like VIII to XII must avoid social media. They should have no social media presence as it affects their studies, wastes time and creates unnecessary distraction. Online or video games should also be avoided.

A lot is being said on the negative impact of excessive screen time, social media obsession and online gaming addiction among students and how it is affecting their mental health at a very young age. Therefore, we need to make a concerted effort to protect our children from such harmful exposure.
